IMPRESSIVE ACADEMIC PROGRESS

NCAA PUBLIC RECOGNITION AWARDS

Ball State University's athletic programs again earned high marks in the latest multiyear Academic Progress Rate (APR) scores released in May by the NCAA.

All 19 of the Cardinals' teams boasted multiyear averages of at least 957. Miami University was the only other Mid-American Conference school with all of its programs at or above that mark, while Indiana University was the only other public school in the state to achieve the feat.

Ball State had eight programs record multiyear scores of 990 or better, matching Ohio University and Western Michigan University for the most of any MAC school.

The APR, which has a perfect score of 1,000, provides a real-time look at a team's academic success each semester by tracking the academic progress of each student-athlete on scholarship.

The women's golf team was honored for the first time and became the eighth different Ball State team recognized in the 10-year history of the award program. The cross country team has earned the distinction four times, more than any team at Ball State.

MARKETING & PROMOTIONS

Social media was a big focus in 2013-14:

- Twitter followers of @BallStateSports more than doubled from 4,200 to more than 9,500 as of July 1, giving Ball State the fourth-most followers in the Mid-American Conference.
 - All team handles were updated allowing for better branding of Twitter handles as well as making them consistent with one another and the University official Twitter handle.
 - Several head coaches opened accounts.
 - The department increased cross-promotion between Ball State Athletics and Ball State Sports Link accounts.
- Facebook likes increased by more than 100 percent.
- The Ball State Instagram account was launched and as of July 1, Ball State had the most followers in the MAC.

The athletic department unveiled a new concept for Ball State Football Fan Jam that incorporated our Fall Sports teams and more interaction between the fans and our teams. The new design allowed for more on-field activities and helped increase attendance by 15 percent.

- Winter Fan Jam was also redesigned and saw attendance increase by 27 percent.

The department presented the Grand Prize Game 2 in conjunction with Project 10,000, a partnership between Ball State Dance Marathon and Ball State Athletics.

- While weather did not cooperate that night, these two promotions helped secure a fairly-successful student crowd on a rainy and cold night.
- Through corporate partners, the largest amount of prizes were given away to those in attendance.
- Through a private donation, Ball State Athletics was able to present a gift to Ball State Dance Marathon and more importantly, helped start a partnership that will hopefully continue in the future.

STUDENT ATTENDANCE

- Total 2013 football student attendance was 21,376, an increase of 29.8 percent from 2012 and a 112 percent improvement from 2011. When removing the game the day after Thanksgiving, 2013 student attendance was 21,262 in the five home games, averaging 4,252 students per game.
- Football home opener student attendance was 6,480, up 25.7 percent from the 2012 opener and an increase of 120.7 percent from the 2011 home opener.
- Overall student attendance at the women's volleyball home opener increased 20.6 percent from 2012 and was up 29 percent from 2011.
- The women's volleyball match against Toledo drew 751 students and 1,454 total fans. The student attendance more than doubled every individual match turnout by students in 2012 (best was 315 students at the home opener).
- Total students participating in the student rewards program improved 46.7 percent.
- Potentially fueled by a promotion of free beanie hats to students, the men's basketball game vs. Buffalo drew 591 students, the second-best student crowd of the season. Only the game vs. Butler attracted a larger student crowd.

DEPARTMENTAL SUCCESS

TICKET SALES

- Increased gross ticket revenue by 25.0% when compared to 2012-13
- Increased total tickets sold to football games by 36.1% when compared to 2012
- Increased total ticket revenue from football games by 41.4% when compared to 2012

- Increased tickets sold and ticket revenue to men's basketball games
- Increased women's basketball ticket revenue by 31.2%

ALUMNI SUPPORT

The gift from the Hokes and Whitlock allowed current Ball State students to travel, eat meals to and from the game plus attend the game for free.

HONORS & ACHIEVEMENTS

- Deputy Athletics Director of Internal Affairs Pat Quinn was inducted into the Oak Hills High School Hall of Fame on Feb. 10. Quinn coached the Highlanders' baseball team from 1977-81 and led them to three league championships, two district titles, two regional titles, a state championship in 1980 and state runner-up in 1981.
- Senior Associate Athletics Director/Senior Woman Administrator Karin Lee successfully defended her dissertation this spring to earn her Ph.D. in organizational management. Dr. Karin Lee received her degree from Capella University.
- Associate Athletics Director Joe Hernandez was honored by the College Sports Information Directors of America at the annual CoSIDA Convention for his 25 years of service in the industry.

CORPORATE SALES

- Director of Corporate Sales Jeff Weller increased his sales by $116,200.00, a 22 percent improvement.
- In working with corporate partner Ford, Ball State Athletics presented the Ford Oval of Honor at the football game vs. Army. It represented a true partnership between a corporate partner, our department and the Ball State Sports Network.
 - Four World War II Veterans were recognized in a pre-game ceremony on the Fisher Complex grounds.
 - Colonel Dane Rideout, a Ball State Alum and current Garrison Commander at West Point, spoke at the ceremony along with Bill Scholl and Ford Team Detroit representative Frank Bodwell.
- The 45-minute ceremony featured audio and video highlights of the four Veterans, presentation of individual shadowboxes (provided by Ford), and the entire football team shook hands with the Veterans on their way into the Fisher complex.
 - The four Veterans were recognized on-field prior to the National Anthem at the game.
 - WIPB-TV aired the one-hour TV special twice during the month of September and once on Veterans Day in November.
- Ball State signed a new partnership with Play By Play Sports, outsourcing our corporate sales division and creating Ball State Sports Properties.
 - The new partnership combines local knowledge of Jeff Weller and Chris Ulm with experienced duo of Scott Correia and Tim Roth who possess solid connections on a regional and national level with potential sponsors.
 - The five-year agreement provides Ball State Athletics with base revenue, in excess of last year's profit. Escalators for years four and five improve the base revenue and adjustments to profit sharing are also beneficial to Ball State.

MEDIA RELATIONS

- For the second year in a row, the football signing day show was a huge hit and Ball State was one of the only MAC schools that attempted to pull off a live show for multiple hours.
- The department introduced informative and creative infographics that were released through our social media sites every Monday. Created by Joel Godett, these became big hits with our fans and generated thousands of impressions.
- The video created by Joel Godett promoting Jennifer Gilbert for All-America honors was a finalist for a College Sports Media Award for best promo, PSA, tease or intro video. Joel's feature story on Katie Murphy's relationship with her mother earned honorable mention for best feature story this year.
- A social media campaign helped Jennifer Gilbert, Sean Godfrey and Zack Plesac all earn All-America honors this year.
